If you have in your possession gold items that you want to sell and get cash from quickly, then you are on the lookout for gold dealers who are willing to give you a good price for your gold. If your gold item happens to be jewelry that is in a very good condition, manufactured by a well-known brand, or whose craftsmanship is outstanding, then you can begin to hunt for gold buyers who specialize in high-end jewelry. However, if you have scrap gold, broken jewelry, or other unwanted and less desirable gold items there are still plenty of options.

Selling gold jewelry has already infiltrated the Internet arena and there are hundreds of websites that you can go to in order to begin your cash for gold transaction. If you are the type who likes to do things online, you can then try to look for online gold buyers from cashforgold websites or you can sign up on auction sites such as eBay to post the item that you want to sell.

The simplest way to find gold buyers online is to use search engines and type in the appropriate keyword in the search box. Keywords such as "cash for gold", "selling gold online", or "online gold buyers" can provide numerous options. Try experimenting with different keyword combinations until you find an online gold buyer that you want to do business with. Popular cash for gold websites include the very well known and established Cash4Gold.com, and newer market entrants such as GoldKit, and GoldFellow.

You need to remember, though, that more often than not, online gold buyers from various get cash for your gold jewelry websites are expecting to pay you based on the scrap value of your gold. If you are selling your gold jewelry based on its retail price or sentimental significance and craftsmanship, then you might want to look somewhere else.

Your next bet would be auction sites and online classifieds such as eBay and Craigslist. Just create an account in any of these sites through the Register or Create Account link. You can then post your item and wait for online bidders and buyers to personally contact you through the contact information you have provided.

It is always advised to be extra cautious when conducting transactions online. Make it a point to ensure that the online gold buyer you are going to do business with is legitimate and has a good track record. You surely do not want your gold items to fall into the wrong hands and leave you empty-handed.
